

TOP 7 AFFORDABLE BEHRINGER AUDIO INTERFACES FOR MUSIC PRODUCERS

To input and record in computer software through different musical instruments like guitars, microphones, or even pianos, the very essential tool that you need in-between is an audio interface. It is a hardware device that acts as a pathway between a musical instrument and computer software, hence allowing the production of fine-quality audio. Different companies manufacture numerous models of audio interface devices including, Audient, Behringer, Focusrite, etc. Price and availability of audio interfaces may vary from market to market and even company to company. Here are the top 7 affordable Behringer Audio Interfaces that you will surely adore.

Behringer U-Phoria UM2:

- About Product:
Behringer introduced this item in the year 2013.
- Product Features: The U-Phoria UM2 is a versatile audio interface that can be used in any computer operating system like Windows, Mac, Linux, etc. A condenser microphone can be used as an input for this audio interface. Moreover, it supports output from headphones and RCAs and for connecting it to the PC, there is a 2-channel USB cable.

- Price: $45

Behringer U-Phoria UMC22:

- About Product: It was manufactured in August 2015 by Behringer.
- Product Features: The product weighting 1.04 pounds contains a USB audio interface (2x2) which enables microphone and other instruments recording. It comes up with an audiophile feature and Midas Mic Preamplifier to produce improved sound quality. Also, it supports two different operating systems i.e. Windows and Mac.
- Price: $49

Behringer U-Phoria UMC404HD:

- About Product: It came into the market in October 2012 by Behringer.
- Product Features: The Behringer U-Phoria UMC404HD has crashed the marketplace with its amazing feature of 24/192 kHz sound quality. This finely manufactured audio interface device has a sturdy, long-lasting body. Additionally, it enables zero-latency mixes in the audio while Midas mic pre-amplification enhances the sound quality to a great extent.
- Price: $149

Behringer U-Phoria UMC202HD:

- About Product: The manufacture date of this product is October 2012.
- Product Features: With the phantom power of +48V, the Behringer U-Phoria UMC202HD also supports audiophile featured with 24-bit/192 kHz resolution. This makes pulls its sound quality at the top level. The product is highly affordable with the compatibility of working in Windows and Mac OS environments. Connectivity is through a USB 2.0 cable whereas playback options are RCA, XLR, and TRS.
- Price: $79

Behringer U-Phoria 204HD:

- About Product: It was fabricated by Behringer in 2014.
- Product Features: The Behringer U-Phoria 204HD has the most powerful feature of phantom power i.e. of +48V. It consists of a variety of input options followed by Midas preamp solution. A keyboard can also be connected through the MIDI functionality. Moreover, it also includes DAW Tracktion plus 100+ plug-ins.

- Price: $99

Behringer U-Phoria ADA8200:

- About Product: This audio interface was firstly seen in the market in 2013.
- Product Features: A little expensive than others, but has advanced features. It contains an eight-channelled AD/DA interface for a virtual record environment. Every microphone that comes with this audio interface has phantom power capability. The product weighs 4.5 pounds.
- Price: $199

Behringer U-Phoria UCA202:

- About Product: It was released in the year 2001, manufactured in Germany.
- Product Features: One of the most flexible audio interfaces which are Windows and Mac compatible having the capability to connect a variety of instruments. For output purposes, there is a stereo headphone. Additionally, it contains 48 KHz converters that make audio quality entirely exceptional.
- Price: $49

X-----X-----X

Written by:

Salman Abdul Rahim
(Freelance Content Writer)

